NEITHER SIDE IS ANY BETTER OFF

The jury in the case of the R. Connor company against the Wisconsin Central Railway company was ended last week. Friday afternoon the jury bringing in a verdict by which neither side gains anything by the long drawn out suit, which lasted some two weeks, and was one of the most bitterly contested cases that has been tried out in this city for a number of years. The suit was based upon the following facts:

On May 18, 1906, a disastrous fire which originated in a pile of dry wood, owned by the Connor Co. and located on the railway company's right-of-way, where it was awaiting shipment, swept the village of Auburndale. Subsequently the railway company paid out approximately $16,000 in claims for various property losses but refused to reimburse the Connor Co. for their loss.

Thereupon the Connor company brought suit for $40,000, alleging that the railway company, through failure to supply cars for the shipment of the wood mentioned above, was guilty of negligence and therefore to blame for the fire. Incidentally the railway company, contending that the Connor Co., in leaving the wood in pile on the right-of-way was in reality to blame filed a counter claim for the $16,000 they had paid out.

The jury was given eleven questions to answer, and upon these answers depended the verdict. They were as follows:

1. What damage did the R. Connor company sustain by reason of the fire? Ans. $35,538.84.

2. Was the fire which destroyed the property of the Connor company started by fire which came from an engine of the Wisconsin Central Railway Co.? Ans. Yes.

3. Did the Railway company negligently allow combustible and inflammable material to remain on its right of way at Auburndale? Ans. No.

4. If you answer the 3d. question "Yes," then answer this question: Did such negligence consist in whole or in part in allowing wood to remain on its right of way? Not answered.

5. If you answer the 3d. question "Yes," then answer this question: "Yes," then answer this question: Did such negligence consist in whole or in part in allowing combustible and inflammable material to remain in the portion of the right of way between the wood and the house track? Not answered.

6. If you answer question 2 "Yes," then answer this question: Did said fire start in the wood piles or in the right of way between the wood piles and the house track? Ans. In the Wood piles.

7. What was the distance from the east line of the parcel of land described in Ex. 3 of the evidence to the point where the fire started? Ans. 184 feet.

8. If you answer question 3 "Yes," then answer this question: Was the negligence of the railroad the burning of the plaintiff's property? Not answered.

9. Was there any negligence on the part of the Connor company which proximately contributed to the burning of its said property? Ans. No.

10. Was the lease of Feb. 5th, 1902 in force in the winter and spring of 1906? Ans. No.

11. Was the lease of Feb. 1st, 1895, in force in the winter and spring of 1906. Ans. Yes.

It seems that a great deal of the matter hinged on whether the lease mentioned in question 11 was in force at the time of this fire, as these leases, as made by the railroad company are so worded as to relieve the company of damages in case of loss by fire, the use of the railroad company's property being practically free, the lease price being very low, and in view of this fact the company maintained that the lease was still in force, while the Connor company claimed that it had been cancelled, although there was no written evidence to show that this had been done.

The jury was out about 48 hours in their deliberations, the vote standing 9 for the railroad company and 3 for the Connor company. They at one time agreed to disagree, but the judge advised them to come to some agreement in the matter, which resulted as above.

Death of B. F. Worthington.

Frank J. Wood received word this morning of the death of Brainerd T. Worthington, who died at Beloit yesterday. EASTER PROGRAM AT THE 1st CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The Bible school of the Congregational church is preparing an Easter Program quite out of the ordinary line for the service Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

The Boys' Choir and the Choral Union under the direction of Mrs. Geo. Funnell, will sing.

The usual morning service will be held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon when the Knights' Templars of Stevens Point and vicinity will be guests of the local church. An especially good program of music is being prepared under the direction of Mrs. Jas. Wright. Everybody is invited.

Easter Program.

The Congregational Sunday School is arranging to give for its Easter program, "The Triumph of Christ."

This is a missionary theme, grouped under the following heads:

Part I. The Awakening of Life, suggestive of springtime.

Part II. Life Struggling with Death, suggestive of the efforts of the pioneer missionaries.

Part III. The Victory of Life, suggestive of the resurrection of the nation.

Part IV. The Final Triumph.

The following special music will be rendered in connection with this program.

"Awake Thou, That Sleepest"—by the Choral Union.

"Magdalene"—Duet by Stanton Walker Mead.

"Jesus of Nazareth" by the double chorals.

"The Roman Chorus" by the Boy's Choir.

This program will be given next Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, in place of the regular church services.

THE PASSION SERVICE AT THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The Passion service, written and composed by A. B. Gaul, given by the choir of St. John's church on Friday evening, April 3d, was indeed most impressive and inspiring, and a great musical treat to all those who were fortunate enough to be present.

The church was filled, and as the service progressed, from the traitor (Judas, Iscariot) at the Supper of our Lord, on to the denial in the Palace, to the Crucifixion, it covered the last days of our Lord's life on earth. His death and the comfort we have in the unfolding of the gracious purpose, God spared not his own son, but delivered him up for us all. Romans VIII. 32.

Mr. Carberry and Mr. Chester Burdick both of Milwaukee, sang tenor and baritone parts. Those who heard Mr. Carberry last year in "Olivet to Calvary," will remember the beautiful quality of his voice; Mr. Burdick was a stranger here, but his rich baritone voice and his clear, impressive enunciation made his solos most enjoyable.

The organ and piano parts were especially beautiful. Miss Gilkey on the piano assisted Mrs. Witter. St. John's church choir may well be proud that they are able to render and sing such difficult music.

The choruses, duets, trios and quartets were all very well rendered, and reflected much credit on Mrs. Witter who as director and organist, has made the work of the choir by patient training equal to any in the state.

Miss Edith Weeks, Mrs. Redford and Mrs. Purnell were soloists.

Soprano—Mrs. A. L. Voss. Miss Mildred MacKinnon, Mrs. Norman Frisbee, Mrs. Zachary Lansdowne, Mrs. Norbert Roemer, Mrs. Donald Waters, Miss Catherine Gibson.

Altos—Mrs. F. A. Stamm, Mrs. H. Saecker.

Tenors—Mr. A. L. Voss, Mr. C. Stamm, Mr. Louis Reichel.

Basses—Mr. F. A. Stamm, Mr. Walter Lynn, Mr. Walter Stamm, Mr. Geo. McJermid.

OUR MISSING WORD CONTEST

First prize of $1.00 was won by Rosa Froude of 752 11th street north Grand Rapids.

The second prize of a year's subscription to the Tribune was won by Theo. A. Anderson, R. D. No. 2, Rapids.

The missing word was "we" in the sixth line of Normington Bros. advertisement, and judging by the number of answers that came in, somebody must be reading the ads every week.

This week there is another missing word and it is a little harder to locate than have been those of the past three weeks, but then there is no question but what it will be found by a number of the Tribune readers just the same.

Don't be afraid to send in your answer. It doesn't cost very much even if you lose out, and you may get the dollar.

A Good Play Coming.

—"THE TRAFFIC," which comes to Daly's Theatre on April, 23rd, is said to be the most audacious play of serious purpose ever presented to an American public. It deals with the unvarnished truth about the white slave trade. The author of this defiant adventure into dramatic realism is Hanchell Marshall, whose great-grandfather was the famous Chief Justice Marshall. Miss Marshall is a pupil and colleague of Jane Addams, herself a convent-bred student of sociology, a linguist and painter. The young playwright's mother was a grand-daughter of Gov. Valloré of Louisiana, an aristocratic house of French grandees.

Convincing tidbits to facts is the startling feature of THE TRAFFIC. It is to be lavishly staged, costumed and equipped for the local public, and will be presented by a company of competent players. Startling as the effect of "The Traffic" upon the audience, yet it is a play of essential cleanliness—the wholesome cleanliness of truth. The "oldtime"—the man or woman who knows—will be amazed at the audacious truth of its scenes and dialogue, and yet there is not a prurient moment in the progress of the four acts. In a large and daring way "The Traffic" propounds the momentous question, "Will the American theatregoer approve the truth—the absolute realities of the stage?"

During its record breaking run at Howard's Theatre, Chicago, where it is nightly turning away hundreds of anxious theatregoers, "The Traffic" has been endorsed by prominent sociologists, clergymen, public officials and men and women in all walks and stations of life and seems destined to occupy this cozy playhouse for months to come. So great has been the demand from outside cities another company in every way equal has been formed to supply the wants of the theatregoers throughout the land.

Will Become a Bride.

The Gardner hotel cafe is going to lose its popular manager, Miss Lucy Sedall who is soon to embark on that perilous and unknown sea of matrimony.

Miss Sedall's engagement was announced yesterday being to Augustus Griesse of Winona, Minn. The wedding will be an event of the near future, soon after Easter.

Miss Sedall, whose home is in La Crosse, Wis., has been in charge of the Gardner hotel cafe for nearly two years. She has been exceedingly popular in that position and is a great favorite with the patrons of the hostelry who will regret to see her go.

She takes her final departure from Fargo, Sunday night for La Crosse, where she will be until her marriage. It is said there will be a large delegation of the hotel patrons at the train to bid her farewell and wish her a happy domesticity.—Fargo Forum.

The Miss Sedall mentioned above is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sedall of the town of Sigel and is well and favorably known in this city, and has many friends here to wish her success.

SUPT. CARY ADVISES FARM WORK DURING VACATION

In a circular letter sent to principals and superintendents under date of March 17th, State Superintendent C. P. Carey suggests that it would be a good thing for all concerned if school boys were to secure employment on farms during the summer vacation. He mentions in this connection his experience as principal of a school located in a western farming community. He made careful and systematic plans for placing as many of the town boys as possible on farms for the long vacation period. The outcome was in every way satisfactory. The boys enjoyed it and it acted as a valuable tonic in relation to the school work. The farmers found the boys intelligent with respect to matters connected with the farm and this proved stimulating to them.

Superintendent Cary points out that certain precautions will have to be taken if the plan is carried out. He further states that perhaps some of the boys who do not go to farms can secure plots of ground in or near town for the raising of some suitable crop, such as potatoes. He suggests that a number of boys might rent a field of considerable size on a co-operative basis.

The Man, the Mission and the Maid

By George Randolph Chester

When Hal Gilman got home from college he had left all such things as youth and folly behind him. He was more conscious of this than when, after the welcome home had quieted down a bit, he strolled out and glanced at the Blanchard porch. A dazzling young lady over there was arranging her fluffy summer gown picturesquely as she sat down in one of the big rocking chairs. She was supplied with a pink book, the color of which matched her gown and her cheeks perfectly, but before she opened the book she gave the neighborhood a satisfied inspection and so saw the young man looking out upon his boyhood surroundings with the new eyes of extreme serious maturity.

"Welcome to our beautiful city!" called the girl gaily, rising from her chair.

It was Miss Blanchard after all. He had been in some doubt about it. "Pickles" he had used to call her. He shuddered at the memory of the dreadful word. A year ago, too, he would have vaulted over the picket fence that separated the two lawns, and in an instant more would have been sprawling upon the Blanchard steps. He remembered this also with a pang as he lifted his hat and made a dignified bow to her; then he walked sedately down the Gilman path and out at the Gilman gate; he walked sedately over to the Blanchard gate and opened it; he walked sedately upon the Blanchard path and upon the Blanchard porch, where he deposited himself and his rigid Prussian Albert carefully upon a chair, after having shaken hands most politely with the Blanchard young lady. "How you have blossomed!" he observed with a fatherly gravity that forbade any suspicion of gallantry. "I should scarcely have known you."

"We all change," she solemnly replied through lips that were full and red and most deliciously curved. "We bud, we blossom, we ripen and decay. Life—ah, life is merciless!"

"Yes," he admitted pensively, "we are always growing older."

He was twenty-two and feeling for a mustache; so the weight of advancing years lay heavily upon him. Alice Blanchard reached over to lay her pink book upon the table; she felt out it with her hand, and the book-mark fell out. It was a large, square, cream-tinted envelope and very fat. The address was in a man's bold cursive, and Mr. Gilman frowned as he noted it. This sort of thing was a part of the folly he had left behind him forever. Miss Alice picked up the letter, but she did not do it hastily, nor blush. She put it carefully back in the book; it was too sacred a thing to be trampled. "Already Alice Blanchard had met her fate. She was a woman, now, with all the responsibilities and cares that come to a mature woman of nineteen."

Silence ensued. They looked out upon the pretty suburban street with thoughtful eyes.

"It must be fine to be a man," presently sighed Miss Blanchard; "to be able to go out in the world and fight for fame and fortune."

He turned reproachful eyes upon her.

"Fame?" he expostulated. "Fortune?" There are too many of the world's greedy host after those empty honors."

Miss Blanchard was startled, but gave him instant comprehension. She, too, was just back from college.

"True," she sighed. "How true." "As for myself," he went on, "my die is cast. I have already engaged to devote myself, after a short period of repose with the good grandparents who raised me, to the uplifting of humanity. Settlement work is to occupy my time henceforth."

His eye was calm but stern. He did not glow with enthusiasm. The cause was not one for mere boyish fervor. It was a man's serious, sober, solemn mission that he was undertaking.

"How noble!" breathed the girl.

"Not!" he protested. "It is merely a debt that our family owes to humanity. Oh, you do not know, Miss Blanchard, you cannot conceive of the misery that abounds in this world!"

Miss Blanchard turned upon him large wide eyes that were deep and somber with sudden sorrow.

"Perhaps I do, though," she replied, softly. "Our own burdens teach us sympathy and understanding."

Her eyes turned from him, in explanation, to the fat envelope which its edge peeped out from the book. The envelope did not interest him much, and he returned to the eyes. They were remarkably pretty eyes, very blue, indeed, and full of expression. The lashes above them were long and curved. The hair clustering about her white brow was of the exact golden shade that had let him stretch a point to call it red when he was a boy. Below his shining waves the tip of a pink ear was revealed. Her cheeks were rounded and creamy. Her neck was a firm white, beautifully modeled column that supported her small head most gracefully. "Pickles!" To think that he had ever called her Pickles! Grandfather and Grandmother Gilman were looking out of the side window at them.

"Look at that, now!" said Grandfather Gilman. "Honestly, I feel like I wanted to paddle that boy! There he sits, as stiff as a poker, talking to the prettiest girl in Oakdale with no more life in him than that of a sack of potatoes. Did I, at his age, ever sit like a tailor's dummy on any girl's front porch?"

"Adam," retorted Grandma Gilman, "my distinct recollection is that at twenty-two you were the biggest fool in the county."

The mail-man came up the street.

Hal—and I are brother and sister, as we have always been. You must have but little respect for your daughter if you think she can be so fickle as your remarks would seem to indicate. Only one heart, father, is attuned to each other in this world. There is but one such harmony for me."

"I didn't like his looks," replied Mr. Blanchard in a weak attempt at self-defense.

"Exactly! And you do not like him now!"

From her corsage peeped the corner of the latest fat, cream-tinted letter, and Mr. Blanchard eyed it with extreme disfavor.

"No," he admitted, "I do not like him; but I think that if I were a young man and knew this I would make it a point to come around and display my better side often enough to win confidence."

"And be insulted again," was the retort. "No, father, he will not come. I shall not permit him to do so."

And that night the sad, fair young girl wrote him that he must not come to Oakdale. Her father did not wish him to do so. In this she was not prevaricating; she merely wished to be oppressed. It was so sorrowfully and so subtly grand.

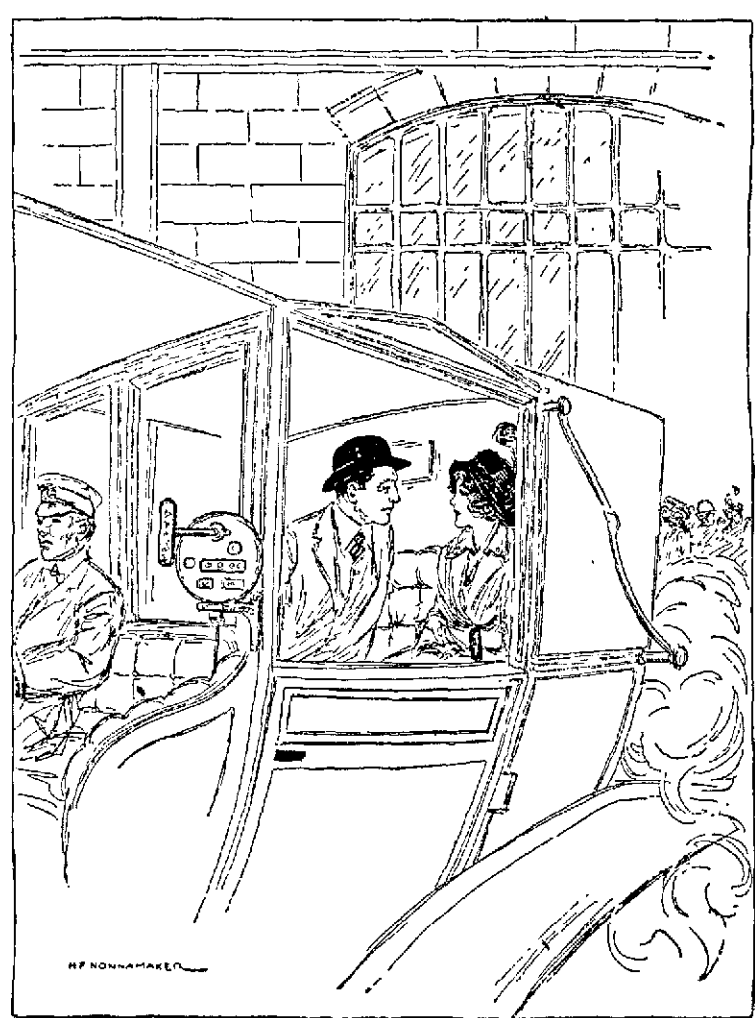

Strange enough, she did not concede this latest oppression to Brother Hal. Of late they had referred less and less often to the cream-tinted envelopes, talking more about settlement work in place of it. It was very pleasant to discuss the hardships and distasteful features of living in slums while walking with a dear brother in the moonlight on balmy summer evenings. It was very pleasant to tack this dainty blood-red letter protectively under an arm and take her, radiant in her beauty, to receptions and dinners and theaters.

They were very, very proud, indeed, of each other, almost more so than if they had been actual brother and sister; but, nevertheless, in the fall, just before Hal was to go away, a change came over Sister Alice. She grew abstracted, and sometimes when the square envelopes came she seemed to hesitate about opening them. Some times she put them away for a full half-day before she read them, and she was eloping!

Mr. Halfred Joyce Gilman moistened his lips. He had a peculiar grip at his throat, and he felt very lonesome all at once. A profound distaste for settlement work, even, settled upon him. Nevertheless, he stiffened himself. If his Sister Alice was so deeply and irrevocably attached to this it was his duty to see that she attained happiness, and he would do it like a man. He told her so.

They chatted very practically now. They discussed the deep and solemn sacrifice that a woman must make when she gave up her girlhood home to make a new home for a noble man. His nearness was such a support to her. She would never have had the courage to take the step if he had not her answers to them were always delayed and always most painstakingly and laboriously written.

The result of this, at the other end of the correspondence, was but natural and logical. One day came a letter that threw her into a flutter of excitement. It made her gasp and hold her breath and turn pale and pink by turns. This thrilling letter—why, it was the very apotheosis of her carefully built-up romance! The stern demand it laid upon her was a call to heroism.

They were going to Hal's last function that night, an anniversary dinner at the Whiteharts, and her brother was her escort. About nine o'clock Grandfather Gilman and Mr. Blanchard who were chatting together, noticed Miss Alice put on her wraps and slip out of the front door. Five minutes later Hal came to bid them good-by, and Mrs. Weatherly went to the door with Hal and his grandmother. Grandfather Gilman looked at Mr. Blanchard. Mr. Blanchard looked at Grandfather Gilman. Half an hour later Alice had not come back. Grandfather Gilman and Mr. Blanchard were still talking.

"By George!" said Mr. Blanchard, "I wonder where Alice has gone!"

"Possibly to the depot with Hal," replied Grandfather Gilman with a curious hesitation. "He has gone to New York to arrange for his fool settlement work; he will be back in about ten days, he says."

"Hum," said Mr. Blanchard, and he lingered for just a few minutes longer. "Say, Adam, there is a train due to leave within five minutes. Suppose we hurry down to the depot. I—I scarcely like to have her come home alone."

In the meantime Mr. Halfred Joyce Gilman had telephoned for a cab to be at his door and had hurried over to the cab and was just about to follow in when a figure flew down the Blanchard path and a voice called out to him to wait. It was Alice. He gripped her hand tensely when she came running up to him.

"You didn't come over here to say good-by again?" he asked.

"No, I am going along," she half-laughed and half-sobbed. "I'll tell you in the cab."

He noticed for the first time that she carried a suit-case. Time, how sends on the web by a road of his own; and, should he not find the female in the middle of her web he tries to attract her by shaking his silken rod as hard as he can.

This courtship takes a very long time. The affair from which I took these notes occupied in fact two days, unless it was that more than one male took part in the performance.

The length and monotony of these courtships is, however, sometimes varied by a rival lover, who in the middle of the courtship suddenly de-sends on the web by a road of his own; and, should he not find the female in the middle of her web he tries to attract her by shaking his silken rod as hard as he can.

had things to pack up there. You haven't here!"

Mr. Peyson looked at him curiously for an instant and moistened his lips, then he suddenly wheeled, and a moment later they saw him worming his way through the crowd.

"I'm sorry, Alice, that I can't tell you the details about him," Hal said. She was standing very stiff and straight herself.

"I don't care to hear. I know enough. I am just praying my gratitude that I am not to be linked for life to any man whom another man could make run without an explanation."

Hal scarcely heard her. Already he was consulting a time-table. It had taken them three hours to make the trip. They had started at 9:30, and it was now 12:30. There was not another train back until three o'clock in the morning, and it would not land her in Oakdale until daylight. She had not comprehended the full phase of it as yet. But Hal swiftly decided that whatever they did and wherever they went they could not stand there, and he bundled her into a cab.

It was not until they were rolling away from the depot that she thought with a gasp of the possible consequences of her act, and cried: "What are we to do?"

"I pass," replied the young man, suddenly and briskly losing all the dignity that had weighted him down when he got his sheepskin, and reverting once more to the slang of early college days.

"It looks to me as if we were in a jam. Never you mind, though. Rely on your Uncle Dudley. He'll put rouge and cold cream and violet talcum on the face of this thing, and don't forget it. Do you know anybody here that you could visit?"

"Not a soul," she wailed. "I only know one family, and they are abroad."

"Never mind," he said, patting her hand where it lay trembling on his arm. "You just keep your eye on Little Willie. First of all we are driving over to my hotel, where I shall leave my suit-case and send a couple of telegrams. Then we'll do a real quick-thinking stunt. Did you ever see me think? It will be a positive joy to you."

She nestled confidently up to him. His voice sounded so good and strong, and she liked him so much better since he had dropped his act. She was glad, too, to find that he had happened to come with her!

At the hotel Hal jumped out with his suit-case. He left her in the cab, but presently he came out, chuckling. He had two telegrams in his hand. One of them he had not opened, but the other he read and re-read with evident appreciation.

"You'd better open this one before I show you mine," he said, handing the unopened telegram to her.

She looked at the inscription. It was addressed to Mrs. Halfred Joyce Gilman. She handed it back demurely.

"It certainly isn't for me," she said with a laugh that had a suspicion of a tear or two in it.

"Doesn't seem to be for anybody," he retorted, laughing a bit nervously himself, and tore it open. It was from her father.

"My dear girl," it read, "you are a very, very foolish child, but it is no trouble at all to forgive you. Come back home as soon as you can."

He handed them both to her.

"You precious young rascal," read Grandfather Gilman's message, "if you are already married when you get this, remember there's got to be another ceremony in Oakdale."

"It looks to me as if we had to make good, Pickles," laughed Hal. "I know where there is a preacher that works overtime. And giving a crisp direction, he jumped into the cab with her. Somehow or other her head happened on his shoulder. Funny that women should cry when they are happy."

Haggerty and his wife were riding home on a street car. Haggerty was in that mellow state which urged him to be extra nice to his wife—to treat her as if he was courting her again. If you know what we mean. Haggerty's wife sought to divert him from the extravagant compliments he was paying her.

"Look dear," she said, "there's a remarkably pretty girl sitting across the aisle from us, two rows back. I want you to notice her."

"Ah, my darling," whispered Haggerty, leaning close, "I have no eyes for beauty now. I just want to look at you."

That's the way he carried it too far and confirmed her suspicions that he was the way he was.

First Aerial Spy.

Herr Michowski, a German Pole attached to a Leipzig firm of aeroplane manufacturers, is now languishing in a Russian prison, and is likely to become famous as the world's first flying spy. He was arrested early in February, as he alleged, lost his way in a fog and been compelled to effect an emergency landing. The Russian military authorities were persuaded that his presence near important fortifications concerned espionage, and he is now formally indicted on that charge. The German government has so far tried in vain to secure his release on representation that Michowski at the time of his flight over Russian territory, was engaged in an attempt to win one of the long distance prizes offered by the German national flying endowment.

Life's Hardships.

A tragic case occurred recently in a court of law at Amberg, Germany. A young girl who was called as a witness begged to be spared the ordeal of having to answer the usual questions with regard to her past. She had, she said, a position as cashier and had just become engaged, and she feared that she would be utterly disgraced if she was obliged to state publicly the fact that she had when very young been punished for a small theft. The court nevertheless insisted on her answering the question, and the girl thereupon opened a vein in court. She now lies in danger of death.

It is claimed that the proper stroke and motions of the arms and legs are more readily acquired in this manner than in the water, as is the more general way of teaching swimming.

The student is suspended by a wide belt from an overhead rail, while the feet are attached to a pair of ropes running over pulleys and adjustable to various requirements.

The pupils therefore the movements of the breast stroke until the action becomes almost instinctive.

PLACE TO KEEP PLAYTHINGS

Does Away With Litter, and May Be Considered an Ornament to the Apartment.

I find this plan most successful for keeping the children's toys, living as I do in a small house, saving a contributor to the Modern Priscilla. I secured four boxes of equal size (good size boxes), large enough for two to give a small wardrobe effect when placed one upon the other endwise. The ends of the other two boxes were used for shelves in these. The whole was placed in a convenient corner and covered smoothly with cretonne. In the lower box, closed by a loosely hanging curtain, the children were taught to put all toys. The upper box was neatly lined with canvas throughout, and with a curtain meeting the top below and having a draw string at top and bottom, it provided three dustproof shelves for linen or any of the many things that it is hard to find a place for in the small house. The outside appearance is very effective, especially if the cretonne is matched with other hangings, or with the paper of a room.

Calendar Blotters.

A rather well known but useful little gift is that of a calendar blotter. It is quickly made and very inexpensive. From a large 10 cent desk blotter cut smaller blotters, say 6 by 3 inches. Paste upon each of these smaller blotters a small calendar leaf. When finished, you will have twelve small calendars, each labeled with one of the months. Then the pack is arranged in order from January to December and tied with a broad red ribbon. Slip a twig or so of holly or mistletoe under the bow.

To Freshen a Hat.

To renew the appearance of the navy blue straw hat for this spring's wear, when the trimmings are removed, wash the straw and wipe it clean of dirt. Before it dries scrub it with blue aniline dye with a stiff brush. If you do not object to a shiny finish there are small tins of hat enamel in all colors to be had at the drugists for about ten cents.

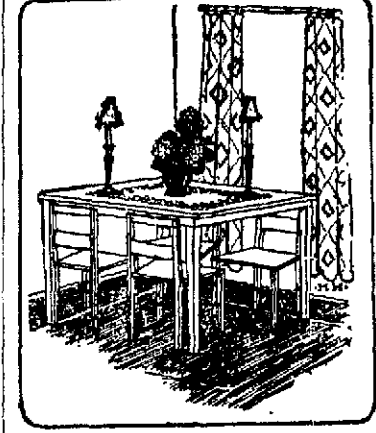

NEWEST IN FURNITURE

REMARKABLY PRETTY THINGS HAVE BEEN DESIGNED.

Breakfast Table Set Not Unreasonably Expensive, and Durable—Furn Stand a Delightful Accessory for Dining Room.

An inexpensive Austrian ware for the breakfast table is called Rusticana. It comes in many odd shapes, though the same decoration holds throughout. It is cream colored, with garlands of large, brightly colored German flowers. Pitchers are from 25 cents to $1. Breakfast cups are 35 cents apiece; cups, 15 cents; egg trays, $1; platters, $1; bowls, 50 cents.

An attractive breakfast table is shown in the illustration. It is odd in design and takes up little space, as the four chairs are low of back and are made to exactly fill the four quarters of the table. It is also a fine card table. The amazingly low price for table and chairs is $21. It is in dull oak.

An oblong, three-shelf stand, with a handle stretching above the top shelf, was seen at $12. This was similar to a muffin stand, but newer of design.

A delightful dining room accessory is a fern stand. It has a zinc lined flower box, and is about the height of an ordinary table. These fern stands are often very handsome. One of mahogany with cane insets was seen at $17. This had square ends. And one with rounded box ends cost $20. A dull oak stand was $11.

A mahogany tea-wagon, which is shown in the last drawing, costs $20, and another one in oak and cane, with a cretonne-filled tray, is $25.

Two little high-chairs for the babies were most delightful little things—of mahogany, both of them. One at $22 was a chippendale, and the other was a Windsor at $12.—Philadelphia Record.

PUT TRIMMING ON HAT BAND

To the Small Bonnet This Idea Skillfully Done Has a Very Charming Effect.

Not being able to find a new way to trim a hat, this year's millinery artist has followed the ingenious method of taking the trimming from the hat and confining it to the band which goes around the head.

What funny things they are—these new little, untrimmed shapes, with a floral band to go around the back of the head under the high cascade knot! One produced by a leading importer is a flat-crowned, narrow-brimmed bit of lavender straw, without one symptom of flower, ribbon or feather any place on its limited expanse. To go under the knot, however, there is a band of thickly studded violets—almost humorously, in fact.

It is certainly a sensation, and the dealers are all predicting for this little flat hat, with the wayward trimming, an immense vogue for the spring.

USE FOR OLD LACE CURTAINS

May Be Employed for Effective Designs in Decorative Needlework as Suggested.

The housewife who is the owner of some really pretty old lace curtains has in them valuable materials for economical decorative needlework if the fairly good parts of the curtain display effective designs. If the design is small and dainty and enough duplicates of it are intact, then they may be applied successfully to net for yokes, cuffs and even panels for children's wash dresses. For the latter purpose the pattern should be sharply cut out and arranged to the best advantage on a background of linen or washable material and basted firmly, taking care that all of it is perfectly flat. Either buttonhole or eyelet invisibly in white or use a thicker thread and border stitch. Let the applique stand out distinctly; if fancy dictates, work in velvings and other markings to suit your taste.

It is a comparatively easy matter to convert the larger undamaged pieces of old lace curtains into a variety of table and cushion covers, etc. By combining with linen or batiste very effective bureau or table covers can be made in many attractive patterns.

PLACE TO KEEP PLAYTHINGS

Does Away With Litter, and May Be Considered an Ornament to the Apartment.

I find this plan most successful for keeping the children's toys, living as I do in a small house, saving a contributor to the Modern Priscilla. I secured four boxes of equal size (good size boxes), large enough for two to give a small wardrobe effect when placed one upon the other endwise. The ends of the other two boxes were used for shelves in these. The whole was placed in a convenient corner and covered smoothly with cretonne. In the lower box, closed by a loosely hanging curtain, the children were taught to put all toys. The upper box was neatly lined with canvas throughout, and with a curtain meeting the top below and having a draw string at top and bottom, it provided three dustproof shelves for linen or any of the many things that it is hard to find a place for in the small house. The outside appearance is very effective, especially if the cretonne is matched with other hangings, or with the paper of a room.

Calendar Blotters.

A rather well known but useful little gift is that of a calendar blotter. It is quickly made and very inexpensive. From a large 10 cent desk blotter cut smaller blotters, say 6 by 3 inches. Paste upon each of these smaller blotters a small calendar leaf. When finished, you will have twelve small calendars, each labeled with one of the months. Then the pack is arranged in order from January to December and tied with a broad red ribbon. Slip a twig or so of holly or mistletoe under the bow.

To Freshen a Hat.

To renew the appearance of the navy blue straw hat for this spring's wear, when the trimmings are removed, wash the straw and wipe it clean of dirt. Before it dries scrub it with blue aniline dye with a stiff brush. If you do not object to a shiny finish there are small tins of hat enamel in all colors to be had at the drugists for about ten cents.

BRIGHT STRIPES THE VOGUE

Colors and Combinations for Spring May Almost Be Described as Glaring.

The Roman stripes with their dazzling bright hues are to be worn this spring by women.

From all indications the red and gold stripes are to be displayed in every possible guise, say the merchants.

In vests and sashes and even in more startling ways the bright stripes are to be worn.

The most popular way of wearing the Roman colors will be in sashes. They are being shown in the stores made with a bow in the back, built high and with draping tassels on the side.

The stripes also will be seen on the hats. The ribbons will be draped about the hat and will allow a sort of tassel to hang from the side or back.

Other styles will be striped vests. Vests have been worn all winter, but the brighter stripes are to be the spring style. These are to be made with long points and cut on the bias, allowing the stripes to slant away from the points.

FASHION HINTS

The woman of limited income will be wise to adopt one color for her wardrobe, with variations of tone and treatment.

The turban shows no signs of waning.

One of the fashionable colors is stone gray.

Both long and short sleeves are fashionable.

Among the late skirts are those cut with yokes.

Hats of corduroy are fashionable for young girls.

Fabrics show designs borrowed from the Chinese.

Many new spring costumes show the rippling flounce.

For morning wear the silk or satin skirt holds its own.

Rich flower tones appear in the colors of the new fabrics.

Checks the Vogue.

Checks are used almost as liberally as stripes and plaids. Black-and-white checked street suits are shown in all the newest cuts. They are always a good choice for the women who need not be very economical. For the woman who can have only one suit the checked one is hardly the right choice. It is much more noticeable than one of plain color, and therefore the owner of one time of a plain colored suit, moreover, black-and-white checked woollen goods does grow soiled rather quickly. Small as the amount of white seems to be at a glance in such a suit, it is really half of the whole surface. It is hardly to be wondered at that it soon needs to be sent to the cleaner.

White Gowns for Spring.

So many and various of type are the white gowns now being made up for spring services, that unquestionably a "white" season confronts us. The costumes likely to be first worn—at after Easter church weddings and the like—are those in tulle made up into skirts with circular flounces and into bodies trimmed with narrow ruffles, and the embroidered yokes, veiling bengaline skirts. Somewhat less elaborate are the rathene gowns made up with heavy flit lace and with girldie and platings in colored voile, and the wool crepons with embroidered batiste yokes and sleeves.

New Handkerchiefs.

There is quite a departure from customary handkerchief styles this season. Some are trimmed with footings; black and white handkerchiefs are quite the thing; colored handkerchiefs are very fashionable; the handkerchief proper being the color and the border of white.

NO BEAUTY FOR HIM.

Haggerty and his wife were riding home on a street car. Haggerty was in that mellow state which urged him to be extra nice to his wife—to treat her as if he was courting her again. If you know what we mean. Haggerty's wife sought to divert him from the extravagant compliments he was paying her.

First Aerial Spy.

Herr Michowski, a German Pole attached to a Leipzig firm of aeroplane manufacturers, is now languishing in a Russian prison, and is likely to become famous as the world's first flying spy. He was arrested early in February, as he alleged, lost his way in a fog and been compelled to effect an emergency landing. The Russian military authorities were persuaded that his presence near important fortifications concerned espionage, and he is now formally indicted on that charge. The German government has so far tried in vain to secure his release on representation that Michowski at the time of his flight over Russian territory, was engaged in an attempt to win one of the long distance prizes offered by the German national flying endowment.

Life's Hardships.

A tragic case occurred recently in a court of law at Amberg, Germany. A young girl who was called as a witness begged to be spared the ordeal of having to answer the usual questions with regard to her past. She had, she said, a position as cashier and had just become engaged, and she feared that she would be utterly disgraced if she was obliged to state publicly the fact that she had when very young been punished for a small theft. The court nevertheless insisted on her answering the question, and the girl thereupon opened a vein in court. She now lies in danger of death.

It is claimed that the proper stroke and motions of the arms and legs are more readily acquired in this manner than in the water, as is the more general way of teaching swimming.

The student is suspended by a wide belt from an overhead rail, while the feet are attached to a pair of ropes running over pulleys and adjustable to various requirements.

The pupils therefore the movements of the breast stroke until the action becomes almost instinctive.

CRANBERRY BOGS ARE THREATENED BY PESTS
That the growers of cranberries in Wisconsin should keep a lookout for vine and fruit worms this season and be ready to resist their inroads, is the advice of O. G. Malde, superintendent of the cranberry station operated by the College of Agriculture at Grand Rapids. Mr. Malde says that while the insect pests were not noticeably prevalent in 1913, they were quite generally distributed over the cranberry districts in such a way as to make it possible for them to increase in alarming numbers and affect a large territory this spring, providing no steps are taken to combat them.

Growers, he declares, should be prepared to completely submerge their cranberry bogs within ten days after the first insects appear, which, with a favorable season, is likely to be late in April. As the place of first attack is invariably where they were present in greatest numbers during previous years, it should be an easy matter to keep watch of conditions. When the insects are discovered, the bogs should be covered with water for three or four days at intervals during late June or July.

As water injures cranberry blossoms, great caution is necessary at this period to keep the flood water from rising too high. Fungus diseases in Wisconsin are usually treated with two sprays of Bordeaux mixtures in the latter part of May and early in June.

There are four wings to the capital at Madison. There's the Taft wing, the Roosevelt wing, the McGovern wing, and the La Follette wing. These wings are as different and as divergent as cross roads. The Taft and Roosevelt wings have been permanently vacated, and the La Follette and McGovern wings will be vacated by order of the sovereign people on January 1, 1915, and the entire premises handed over to a united and militant democracy. Everybody get busy.—Oconto Enterprise.

C. A. Seifert, of the railway commission office at Madison, came here Monday to install a new system of bookkeeping at the local water and light plant. He paid railroad fare, hotel bills and lost a couple of days, time incommensurate, and all in the world he accomplished could have been furnished the commission for a two-cent stamp. The same Nils J. Laugen, who draws down five thousand a year from the tax payers, was trying to tell a lot of intelligent farmers in the southern part of the state they weren't hard hit by taxes, when they had their tax receipts in their pockets. This "Wisconsin Idea" is great. Algoma Herald.

The Leader is not promoting the interest of any particular Democrat for any particular office at this particular time, but it is not interested in trying to promote Democratic success in state and county elections this fall and feels in duty bound to sound a note of warning to Democrats. This warning is: Beware of the poisonous, insidious slanders on honest Democrats born and bred and blazoned abroad thru the opposition press. There is a class of political purists in Wisconsin who, while denouncing the bipartisanship of business by deception and demagoguery seek to practice the more baneful and hypocritical evil of the bipartisanship of politicians.—Arcadia Leader.

The conception some people have of being "progressive" is, that they must sanction the squandering of the people's money by the present state administration. We believe this is a fallacy, and as the burden of taxes is ever increasing, a remedy for this evil must be found. A progressive need not necessarily countenance being mulcted and picked dry. The Democratic national administration too, is progressive, but it is marked by an entirely different code of morals. Economy and the best interests of the masses is here sought, and is, we believe, being found. Your "progressives" of the Republican state administration are of an entirely different brand—their slogan appears to be: "Tax the people for all they are worth—form new commissions—make huge appropriations—create soft berths among the faithful—and we will entrench ourselves with a machine that is supreme."—Brown County Democrat.

There is one thing which the business interests of this country should not fail to understand. Woodrow Wilson is doing more to put the political yawper out of business than all the efforts that have been made by all the business interests combined. It is not a question of whether we like him or of whether we agree with him. In a quiet and forceful way he is accomplishing the things that must be done, if the demagogue is to find his occupation gone. A man who can link Bob La Follette and Uncle Joe Cannon in a duet of denunciation is certainly accomplishing something. It can safely be said that any man who can unite those two opposite forces of American politics is steering somewhere. Whatever may be our views upon the tariff, it is undeniable that it has been revised, revised as the people demanded, whether they were right or wrong, and the sun still do move. Whether we were for or against the currency bill, the fact is that it is now the law of the land, and the banks are still charging the same old interest at the same old single corporate suicide as a result of stand, and there had not yet been a fiat legislation. The most significant fact, however, is that with the trust legislation before Congress there is no howl from business about the thousand and one things that must not be done—the whole business chorus now is what must be done. In other words, this quiet and forceful man in the White House has not only driven a recalcitrant Congress to the trough and made it drink, but he has so convinced the country of his power and his good sense that he has impressed the people with a constructive, rather than an obstructive spirit. And that is, after all, the greatest accomplishment of this administration.—The Searchlight.

MINISTER SUES WOODMAN
DEPUTY: CHARGES LABEL
La Crosse, Wis., April 6.—Alfred Leslie Morse of Anoka, Minn., former Necedah, Wis., minister, one of the leaders of the Modern Woodmen Insurgents in the Middle West, has started a $50,000 damage suit against B. F. Keeler, state deputy of the Woodmen, charging libel.

The libelous statements alleged were in a pamphlet, "Who's Who and Why," said to have been circulated by Keeler in the campaign of the administration against insurgency and accused Morse, it is alleged, of having deserted his wife and family while in Necedah.

Morse says he incurred the enmity of head officers of the order through preparing an insurance table purporting to show that the higher rates imposed by the head camp in 1910 are not warranted.

Killed in Auto Accident.
Tomah Journal.—Dr. L. M. Underwood, the young veterinarian of this city, was killed almost instantly last Friday afternoon by being crushed under his automobile in an accident at the bridge over the dredge ditch near Valley Junction.

Dr. Underwood accompanied by John Knick left this city about 2 p. m. for Mather with his car which had just come from the garage after being overhauled and repaired. After going a few miles Dr. Underwood found that the clutch was not working properly and he was unable to shift it from high to low. After he had passed Valley Junction he concluded that he could not make Mather and turned about to return to Tomah. As they approached the dredge ditch going at a rapid rate the car began to skid from side to side, and as it struck the bridge planks Dr. Underwood lost control of it. The front wheel struck the iron railing on one side and then the car bounded to the other side, striking the railing with such force as to bend it over.

Up to this time both of the occupants of the car remained in their seats, but at this point Mr. Knick either jumped or was thrown from the car to the bank of the ditch, and was unhurt. Dr. Underwood was in the car as it plunged off from the bridge and turned turtle on the side of the ditch below. He was pinned beneath it, unable to move or speak. Knick could do nothing alone but summoned assistance in a few moments to lift the car. Dr. Underwood was found pinned to the ground with one of the wheels of the car resting on his head and his skull crushed. He was alive when found but expired within a few minutes.

How Savings Grow.
The Citizens' National bank has advertised for some time that it will place $1 to the credit of every baby born in the city, and it advises the parents of the children to deposit on each birthday of the child as many dollars as the youngster is years old, then to let the money remain in the bank, drawing interest, until the child reaches twenty-one. It is a clever advertisement and excellent advice. If parents did that the total sum deposited to the credit of the child upon the twenty-first birthday—including $21 for that birthday—would be $231, or an average of $11 a year. But the bank account on that twenty-first birthday would show a much larger sum, $284.53 in fact, computed at the savings bank rate of interest, 3 per cent.

A person who expects to collect one third of the fine for informing a game warden of violations of the state fish and game laws must also appear in court and prosecute, according to an opinion given by Attorney General Owen.

NEITHER SIDE IS ANY BETTER OFF

The jury in the case of the R. Connor company against the Wisconsin Central Railway company, was empaneled last week. Friday afternoon the jury bringing in a verdict by which neither side gains anything by the long drawn out suit, which lasted some two weeks, and was one of the most bitterly contested cases that has been tried out in this city for a number of years. The suit was based upon the following facts:

On May 18, 1906, a disastrous fire which originated in a pile of dry wood, owned by the Connor Co. and located on the railway company's right-of-way, where it was awaiting shipment, swept the village of Auburndale. Subsequently the railway company paid out approximately $10,000 in claims for various property losses but refused to reimburse the Connor Co. for their loss. Thereupon the Connor company brought suit for $40,000, alleging that the railway company, through failure to supply cars for the shipment of the wood mentioned above, was guilty of negligence and therefore to blame for the fire. Incidentally the railway company contending that the Connor Co., in leaving the wood in pile on the right-of-way was in reality to blame for a counter claim for the $10,000 they had paid out.

The jury was given eleven questions to answer, and upon these answers depended the verdict. They were as follows:

1. What damage did the R. Connor company sustain by reason of the fire? Ans. $35,538.84.

2. Was the first fire which destroyed the property of the Connor company started by fire which came from an engine of the Wisconsin Central Railway Co.? Ans. Yes.

3. Did the Railway company negligently allow combustible and inflammable material to remain on its right of way at Auburndale? Ans. No.

4. If you answer the 3d. question, "Yes," then answer this question: Did such negligence consist in whole or in part in allowing wood to remain on its right of way? Not answered.

5. If you answer the 3d. question, "Yes," then answer this question: Did such negligence consist in whole or in part in allowing combustible and inflammable material to remain in the portion of the right of way between the wood and the house track? Not answered.

6. If you answer question 2 "Yes," then answer this question: Did the fire start in the wood piles or in the right of way between the wood piles and the house track? Ans. In the wood piles.

7. What was the distance from the east line of the parcel of land described in Ex. 3 of the evidence to the point where the fire started? Ans. 184 feet.

8. If you answer question 3 "Yes," then answer this question: Was the negligence of the railroad the burning of the plaintiff's property? Not answered.

9. Was there any negligence on the part of the Connor company which proximately contributed to the burning of its said property? Ans. No.

10. Was the lease of Feb. 5th, 1902 in force in the winter and spring of 1906? Ans. No.

11. Was the lease of Feb. 1st, 1905 in force in the winter and spring of 1906? Ans. Yes.

It seems that a great deal of the matter hinged on whether the lease mentioned in question 11 was in force at the time of this fire, as these leases, as made by the railroad company are so worded as to relieve the company of damages in case of loss by fire, the use of the railroad company's property being practically free, the lease price being very low, and in view of this fact the company maintained that the lease was still in force, while the Connor company claimed that it had been cancelled, although there was no written evidence to show that this had been done.

The jury was out about 48 hours in their deliberations, the vote standing 9 for the railroad company and 3 for the Connor company. They at one time agreed to disagree, but the judge advised them to come to some agreement in the matter, which resulted as above.

EASTER PROGRAM AT THE
1ST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The Bible school of the Congregational church is preparing an Easter Program quite out of the ordinary line for the service Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

The Boys' Choir and the Choral Union under the direction of Mrs. Geo. Purnell, will sing.
The usual morning service will be held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon when the Knights' Templars of Stevens Point and vicinity will be guests of the local church. An especially good program of music is being prepared under the direction of Mrs. Jas. Wright. Everybody is invited.

Easter Program.
The Congregational Sunday School is arranging to give for its Easter program, "The Triumph of Christ."

This is a missionary theme, grouped under the following heads:
Part I. The Awakening of Life, suggestive of springtime.

Part II. Life Struggling with Death, suggestive of the efforts of the pioneer missionaries.

Part III. The Victory of Life, suggestive of the resurrection of the nation.

Part IV. The Final Triumph.
The following special music will be rendered in connection with this program:

"Awake Thou, That Sleepest"—by the Choral Union.
"Magdalene"—Duet by Stanton Walter Mead.

"Jesus of Nazareth" by the double chorus.
"The Roman Chorus" by the Boy's Choir.

This program will be given next Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, in place of the regular church services.

THE PASSION SERVICE AT

The Passion service, written and composed by A. B. Gaul, given by the choir of St. John's church on Friday evening, April 3d, was indeed most impressive and inspiring, and a great musical treat to all those who were fortunate enough to be present.

The church was filled, and as the service progressed, from the traitor (Judas Iscariot) at the Supper of our Lord, up to the denial in the Palace, to the Crucifixion, it covered the last days of our Lord's life on earth. His death and the comfort we have in the unfolding of the gracious purpose, God spared not his own son; but delivered him up for us all. Romans VIII. 32.

Mr. Carberry and Mr. Chester Burdick both of Milwaukee, sang tenor and baritone parts. Those who heard Mr. Carberry last year in "Olivet" were a stranger here; but his rich baritone voice and his clear, impressive enunciation made his solos most enjoyable.

The organ and piano parts were especially beautiful. Miss Gilkey on the piano assisted Mrs. Witter. St. John's church choir may well be proud that they are able to render and sing such difficult music. The choruses, duets, trios and quartettes were all very well rendered, and reflected much credit on Mrs. Witter who as director and organist, has made the work of the choir by patient training equal to any in the state.

Miss Edith Weeks, Mrs. Redford and Mrs. Purnell were soloists.
Soprano—Mrs. A. L. Voss, Miss Mildred MacKinnon, Mrs. Norman Frisbee, Mrs. Zachary Lansdowne, Mrs. Norbert Roemer, Mrs. Donald Waters, Miss Catherine Gibson.

Alto—Mrs. F. A. Stamm, Mrs. H. Saecker.
Tenors—Mr. A. L. Voss, Mr. C. Stamm, Mr. Louis Reichel.

Basses—Mr. F. A. Stamm, Mr. Walter Lynn, Mr. Walter Stamm, Mr. Geo. McDermid.

Farms and Unimproved Land.
One farm consists of 401 acres with good buildings, 130 acres of which is under the plow, about 160 acres in timber, mostly hard maple, and the balance of land is pasture and brush land. All of the land is slightly rolling and there is no waste land on any part of the 401 acres.

The farm can be easily subdivided into 2 or 3 separate farms. There is a cheese and butter factory within one mile from the house, and the house is three miles from Sherry station, on the Soo Railway.

Another farm near the above consists of 16 acres, 20 acres of which is cleared and the balance is hardwood timber land.

MICHIGAN PEOPLE TO TOUR WISCONSIN

Manistiquette, Mich., March 30.—More than 200 automobiles containing 500 men, women and children of the upper peninsula of Michigan will motor through the state of Wisconsin on a trade extension tour to Milwaukee and Chicago in July. The tour is being given under the auspices of the Association of Cloverland Commercial Club Secretaries, of which H. H. Barton, Secretary of the local club, is president.

When the line is formed at Menominee, from where the official start will be made, it will extend a distance of more than ten miles, and probably will be the largest gathering of cars ever congregated for a trip of like distance. It is planned to spend about ten days between the upper peninsula and Chicago, going and coming, with two days in Milwaukee. Arrangements are being made by Geo. P. Chambers, Secretary of the Association, for hotel and garage accommodations for the tourists. It will be no easy proposition to entertain 500 people over night and extreme care will be exercised in choosing the city or cities therein to put up.

It is proposed by the association to invite the Wisconsin state organization of commercial clubs to participate in the tour. The trip will be made for the purpose of acquainting the people of the middle west with the summer resorts and automobile touring facilities of the peninsula and also Wisconsin.

INDUSTRIAL HYGIENE

Poultry raisers have found that overcrowding chickens in a coop decreases the production of eggs. Best returns require chicken houses built to provide ample sunlight and good ventilation. Cleanliness is an important factor in good business management. Modern poultry yards are models of good sanitary management. Successful dairymen insure the life and productivity of their dairy animals by careful and intelligent attention to heat, food ventilation and adequate sunlight.

Efficiency engineers studying factory management have arrived at similar conclusions on the productivity of human workman. Wise managers know that the physical surroundings and conditions of work tell in the product. They look upon the construction of modern sanitary shops as a necessity of "good business." There are still too many of the other type of managers who look upon business success or failure as a matter of luck. Their factories are overcrowded. The owners, in turn, help to overcrowd the bankruptcy courts.

Good home management demands as much attention to principles of hygiene as given in care of poultry or cattle. Anyone whose own eyes have been opened can answer whether it is being given. School houses are the workshops of a considerable proportion of the population of this country. These young workmen handle rights. It is bad business to handicap their efforts.

Stuffy interiors lead to headaches, to drowsiness, and to nervousness. It is to be expected that good work will be done against these handicaps? (Competition is such nowadays that to secure success every bit of energy has to be properly directed. Nobody with a sore thumb is going to strike as hard a blow as though his hands were strong. Clerks, factory employees and children in school simply won't buck aching heads against knotty problems. You don't and I don't. Isn't it foolish to think those who work for us will?)

Water Very Low.

The stage of the water in Lake Winnebago and the Fox river is lower at the present time than it has been at this time of the year for the past ten years. The water was at a stage nine inches below the crest of the Menasha dam this morning and the reefs along the river, which are usually covered by water at this time of the year, are plainly evident, with the rugged rocks at least six inches above the water level. Local mill owners do not look for trouble from high water this year, unless the spring rains are unusually heavy.

A force of government workmen are engaged at the John Arlt boat livery on Broad street at the present time, repairing the light house and river crabs in preparation for the opening day of navigation season next Wednesday. —Menasha Record.

Got His Glasses Back.

Vesper, Wis., March 30.—An enterprising farmer here recovered in a strange manner a pair of lost spectacles, but he is at a loss whether to feel himself lucky and proclaim the merits of his cleverness, or to rail at the dishonesty of seed dealers.

He decided that his clever crop would be improved if he made a was caused by a broken rail, as the and disposed of it to a dealer, for a small price. Soon the farmer missed his glasses. Later he sent to a well known seed house and paid a big price for a much advertised variety. A few days later his order was received, and in the sacks he found the missing glasses.

DEMOCRATIC STATE PRESS.
"The republican party has fought every battle for human rights waged on this continent for forty years," says Senator La Follette, in his weekly of March 7th. The senator missed the insertion of two words in the editorial of which the above is a quotation. He should have said, "fought for and against."

What human rights did that party fight for under Mat Quay and Mark Hanna and Aldrich and Payne? Were not human rights involved when it stole the presidency of 1876, since the senator has gone back to forty years ago? Were not human rights at stake in the "blocks of five" and "crisp two dollar bills" era?

"Promised tariff revision was jugged for ten years," says the senator, but it wasn't jugged ten months by the democrats, he should have added, but he didn't. The senator does not mean to say that human rights were endangered when he quit the G. O. P. or when Roosevelt broke loose, does he?—Oconto Enterprise.

The One Best Bet.

The Rev. Joseph H. Twitchell, for nearly fifty years pastor of the Asylum Hill Congregational church in Hartford, Conn., saw three years of service in the civil war as chaplain of the Seventy-first New York regiment. In the course of his service Mr. Twitchell's experiences were, of course, many and varied. One of them, of a serio-comic nature, has been recently made public.

After a certain fight the surgeon told the chaplain that one poor fellow was quite beyond hope. The chaplain leaning over the dying soldier, "Well, my dear fellow," he began in a voice of deep emotion, "you are very badly wounded, and if you have anything to say or any word that you want sent to your family, tell me now."

The poor fellow understood. "My inside coat pocket," he breathed painfully.

The chaplain felt a pocketbook there and took it out. "Is that what you want?"

"Yes," was the faint reply, "Open it."

"Here is a ten dollar bill. Is that what you want?"

"Yes."

"What shall I do with it?"

Then the soldier said in a whisper, "Bet you that I don't die."

And he did not.—New York Sun.

Mrs. Mary Compton.

(Contributed.)

Mary Dunham was born October 28, 1850, at Lodi, Seneca county, New York, and died at Plainfield, Wis., March 19, 1914 at the home of her daughter Mrs. J. J. Moore.

In 1878 she was united in marriage with E. H. Compton at Vail, Ill. It was here on a farm where they resided for six years that three of the four children were born, Mrs. Esther Moore of Plainfield, Wis., William Compton of DeKalb, Ill., and Clarence of Mosinee, Wis. The youngest son Elmer was born in Kansas, where the family resided for the seven years following. For the last twenty-three years they have lived in Wisconsin.

At the age of eighteen years Mrs. Compton was converted and joined the Baptist church. In 1896 there being no Baptist church at Rudolph, where they were living, she joined the Methodist church with her children and later transferred her membership to the Methodist church at Plainfield, Wis., of which she was a member at the time of her death.

The last two years of her life she suffered from cancer. Twice she underwent an operation, but it was of no avail. During the last twelve weeks of her life she suffered severely, but during all of her suffering did not murmur or complain. All of her children were with her, during the last weeks and did everything that loving hands could do to relieve her suffering.

Mrs. Compton was a consistent Christian, a wise and loving mother. Quiet and unassuming, yet sympathetic and helpful, she was ever welcome in the sick room and had a large circle of friends.

She leaves to mourn their loss, besides her children and their families one sister of Evansville, Ind., two brothers of Montour, N. Y., one brother of Columbia, Ky., and many other relatives and friends. Funeral services were held in the Methodist church at Plainfield, L. B. Colman, the pastor spoke from the words "She gleaned in the field until even." Beautiful hymns, chosen by the deceased and expressing faith in another life were sung. Interment was made in the Plainfield cemetery.

Who Can Afford An Automobile.

Some weird arithmetic is computed every spring by people who are trying to convince themselves that they can afford an automobile.

Many a man has excluded cost of storage and care from his estimates, on the theory that he can do his own work on the machine. After he acquires the car, he concludes that he did not buy it merely for the pleasure of manipulating oil cans. The car runs down, a costly break occurs. Then he figures that he is saving money by having his machine carefully kept up at the garage. Thus he exceeds the original amount he felt he could afford to invest.

With some people the real question is, can they afford not to have a car? Many a farmer spends three or four hours twice a week driving into a market town. He drags painfully along behind a limping and puffing old horse. Thus he reckons his time at less than the value of a day laborer.

Comparatively few people today have even the most ordinary mechanical skill. This makes the automobile an extravagance for many persons. When people live on farms and in villages, they are apt to own their own homes and perform many tasks of small repair. They become familiar with tools. They could easily perform all ordinary repairs on an automobile.

As they move into larger cities and acquire more social pretensions they call in a mechanic when a door knob gets out of order. They would be hopeless over the slightest irregularity of a machine. They must depend on the tender mercies of the garage keeper and repair man. They fail to get any grip on the mechanical principles of their car, which aggravates the tendency toward costly depreciation.

It is a very different proposition for the man whose business runs in mechanical lines, or keeps up the habit of working with tools. The automobile carefully tended on his home place is probably cheaper than a horse.—Appleton Crescent.

May be an Embryo Capitalist.

Don't poke fun at the boy who comes in from the forks of the creek, with sand in his hair and mud on his face, patches on the north department of his pants and just one "gal-lus" on. He may look seedy now, but ten years from now he may be a bank president, pastor of some church, or pleading eloquently at the bar, or giving out prescriptions to cure the sick and the needy. Just because a boy lives in town and wears two kinds of socks, parts his hair in the middle, smokes a cigarette, curls his hair with his mother's curling iron, with a daddy who has spendulix to burn, that is no sign that he is going to run this country in the future. We will put our money on the same, sensible boy from the forks of the creek.—Hancock News.

The next convention of the Eighth district women's clubs is to be held in Marshfield on May 5 to 7. The Eighth district includes thirteen clubs located in Grand Rapids, Stevens Point, Waunusau and Waupaca, and it is expected that fully 200 visiting clubwomen will respond to the invitation extended by the Marshfield clubs. Among the prominent speakers will be Mrs. Strathern of Kaukauna, state president of the Women's Federation of Clubs, and Miss Ellen Sabin of Milwaukee, president of Milwaukee-Downing college. The last district meeting was held in Grand Rapids.

Arbor and Bird Day.

By proclamation of the Governor which will soon be issued, Friday, May 1, will be designated as Arbor and Bird Day for this year. This is in accordance with a custom observed for a number of years by which the first Friday in May has been designated as Arbor and Bird Day. According to a law enacted by the legislature of 1913, the Arbor and Bird Day Manual is to be issued biennially. Hence it will not be published this year. However, there is ample material in previous issues to serve the needs of schools in preparing for the profitable observance of the day.

WISCONSIN TAXES TOO HIGH

At the Foresters meeting on Wednesday evening, as the result of a debate on the question "Resolved that the present high State tax is justifiable," it was decided that the taxes are altogether too high, the jury consisting of H. B. Welland, A. P. Hirzy, John Flanagan, W. F. Nolmer and John Nilles voting three to two in favor of the negative.

The affirmative held that while it did cost something to keep up the commissions they were doing very effective work, and that the State Aid Highway law was a good thing because it made possible the building of roads by counties which would not otherwise be able to do such work. The negative conceding that the commissions were effective brought out the fact that the same effective work could be done without such extravagant expenditures and that the counties that were taking advantage of the Highway Law were doing so to get their money's worth at although Wood county were now getting more roads, they are paying for, they will in later years pay for more roads than they get or have gotten if other counties go in as strong as we have.

Leonard Marcoux, Leo Barrett, William Rogers and Dr. F. X. Poma-ainville spoke for the affirmative, and Earl Hein, Joseph Perdzock, M. L. Carey and Harry Kemper for the negative. Speaker Perdzock announced that at the next meeting to be held on April 15th, the Side-Rank team will make preparations for an initiation to be held in the near future.

Under the caption, "Wilson Will Win," The Milwaukee Sentinel says: Gentlemen of the Bull Moose persuasion who are scolding President Wilson for repudiating his party platform plan demanding that American coastwise ships should pay no Panama canal tolls should go slow.

What about leading men of their own party who are honorably repudiating the third party platform demand that "American ships engaged in coastwise traffic shall pay no tolls?"

There, for instance, is Col. Roosevelt's friend and the bull moose candidate for governor of New York in 1912, Oscar Straus, who vigorously says of his party's no toll plank: "I throw it to the winds!"

The best men of all parties are supporting President Wilson's stand for the national honor against the treaty wavers. Mr. Wilson will win easily on this proposition, and his victory will go very far to redeem any failure of foreign policy with which his administration may be recharged.

Nothing could be plainer than the language of our treaty contract which the president proposes to live up to. Let us quote it again: "The canal shall be free and open to all vessels of commerce and of war of all nations observing these rules, on terms of entire equality, so that there shall be no discrimination against any such nation or its citizens subjects, in respect to its conditions or charges of traffic or otherwise."

"Of all nations," "on terms of entire equality," "no discrimination" in respect to "charges of traffic." Is it not as plain as a pikestaff? Is the United States government to sink to the level of a police court shyster and claim that when we said "all nations we meant all other nations."

Fancy such a man as John Hay playing the game with loaded dice, or making a bargain with his fingers crossed! Why, if we should insist on twisting and "interpreting" the plain language of that treaty to suit ourselves, and be hanged to the rights of the other party, we should be doing precisely what we were angrily charging Russia with doing only two years or so ago.

Two Republican veils clipped from the Milwaukee Sentinel is good reading for the man who paid for the tax receipt in his pocket and does his own thinking.

Former State Senator Krumrey charges "the old special privilege crowd" with trying to hoodwink the state taxes are due to the so-called "progressive" regime of the last ten years.

We guess the voters are perfectly capable of doing their own "hoodwinking" on that point.

How on earth could they avoid blaming the high taxes on the gang of socialistic tad mongers and followers of the mad mullah who have been instigating, voting and spending the taxes for the last ten years is difficult to see. The accountability goes with the power.

Whatever the blood sucking power of "the old special interests" may have been, it must have been as the mosquito to the vampire, compared with the new special interests that have jacked up the state tax rate over 400 per cent in the last twelve years.

There is no "hoodwinking" about that hard and exasperating fact, anyhow.

"A steam roller has its safety valve and a boy has his. You can sit on a safety valve of a steam boiler if you choose. But you are an awful fool if you do. But what else is it we have, been doing until quite recently but sitting on the safety valve of the boy? The boy's safety valve is in his play. Sit on that, hold it down hard, and you will have trouble. Give him the gutter for a playground, and nothing else, and you will have crime as a matter of course."—Jacob Rills.

Solve the Problem

Wage Earners Become Independent by Buying Farm Lands

The man with a family usually thinks of the day when muscle or brain will have lost some of its cunning and the weekly wage will become less. It is a problem which every man has to face, and it is then that he wishes that he had become a farmer when it was possible to buy land cheap.

It is the farmer who is really secure and has confidence in the future. The farmer has all the conveniences of the city, without its disadvantages. The farmer is independent; come what may he is still secure. But not so the wage earner. BUY A FARM NOW!

It takes just that amount to buy one of the best little forty acre farms in the town of Rudolph, located five miles from city on main county road. 1 mile to cheese factory and two miles to creamery and Rudolph station. Good house, barn, granary and chicken-coop and woodshed. Soil, good clay loam, 25 acres cleared and part under cultivation. 15 acres woods. Enough timber to last a man a life time. Within three years the state macadam road will run by the door, which alone will be worth many dollars to the value of the farm. Some farm machinery goes with the place. There is not another chance like it in Wood county today to secure as good a farm, location and buildings considered for the money. Owner selling owing to old age. A dandy one-man farm where you can make a good living and be independent. The same amount of money will buy only a fair house and lot in the city. How you get a home, good barn, fire wood for life-time, and enough of the best clay land to make an independent living.

No trades considered. Don't wait, see owner at once.

The Man, the Mission and the Maid

When Hal Gilman got home from college he had left all such things as youth and folly behind him. He was more conscious of this than when, after the welcome home had quieted down a bit, he strolled out and glanced at the Blanchard porch. A dazzling young lady over there was arranging her fluffy summer gown picturesquely as she sat down in one of the big rocking chairs. She was supplied with a pink book, the color of which matched her gown and her cheeks perfectly, but before she opened the book she gave the neighborhood a satisfied inspection and so saw the young man looking out upon his boyhood surroundings with the new eyes of extreme serious maturity.

"Welcome to our beautiful city!" called the girl gaily, rising from her chair.

It was Miss Blanchard after all. He had been in some doubt about it. "Pickles" he had used to call her. It shocked at the memory of the dreadful word. A year ago, too, he would have vaulted the two lawns, and in an instant more would have been sprawling upon the Blanchard steps. He remembered this also with a pang as he lifted his hat and made a dignified bow to her; then he walked sedately down the Gilman path and out at the Gilman gate; he walked sedately over to the Blanchard gate and opened it; he walked sedately upon the Blanchard path and upon the Blanchard porch, where she deposited him and his rigid Prince Albert carefully upon a chair, after having shaken hands most politely with the Blanchard young lady. "How you have blossomed!" he observed with a fatherly gravity that forbade any suspicion of gallantry. "I should scarcely have known you."

"No all change," she solemnly replied through lips that were full and red and most deliciously curved. "We bud, we blossom, we ripen and decay. Life—ah, life is merciless!"

"Yes," he admitted pensively, "we are always growing older."

He was twenty-two and feeling for a mustache; so the weight of advancing years lay heavily upon him. Alice Blanchard reached over to lay her pink book upon the table to her right hand, and the book-mark fell out. It was a large, square, cream-tinted envelope and very fat. The address was in a man's bold cursive, and Mr. Gilman frowned as he noted it. This sort of thing was a part of the folly he had left behind him forever. Miss Alice picked up the letter, but she did not do it hastily, nor blush. She put it carefully back in the book; it was too sacred a thing to be treated flippantly. Already Alice Blanchard had met her Fate. She was a woman now, with all the responsibilities and cares that come to a mature woman of nineteen.

Silence ensued. They looked out upon the pretty suburban street with thoughtful eyes.

"It must be fine to be a man," presently sighed Miss Blanchard; "to be able to go out in the world and fight for fame and fortune."

He turned reproachful eyes upon her.

"Fame!" he expostulated. "Fortune! There are too many of the world's greedy host after those empty honors."

Miss Blanchard was startled, but gave him instant comprehension. She, too, was just back from college.

"True," she sighed. "How true!" "As for myself," he went on, "my life is cast. I have already engaged to devote myself, after a short period of repose with the good grandparents who raised me, to the uplifting of humanity. Settlement work is to occupy my time henceforth."

His eyes were calm but stern. He did not glow with enthusiasm. The cause was not one for mere boyish fervor. It was a man's serious, sober, solemn mission that he was undertaking.

"How noble!" breathed the girl. "No!" he protested. "It is merely a debt that our family owes to humanity. Oh, you do not know, Miss Blanchard, you cannot conceive of the misery that abounds in this world!"

Miss Blanchard turned upon him large wide eyes that were deep and somber with sudden sorrow.

"Perhaps I do, though," she replied, softly. "Our own burdens teach us sympathy and understanding."

Her eyes turned from him, in explanation, to the fat envelope where its edges peeped out from the book. The envelope did not interest him much and he returned to the eyes. They were remarkably pretty eyes, very blue, indeed, and full of expression. The lashes above them were long and curved. The hair clustering about her white brow was the exact golden shade that had in her was a boy. Below his shining waves the tip of a pink nose was revealed. Her cheeks were rounded and creamy. Her neck was a firm white, beautifully modeled column that supported her small head most gracefully. Pickles! To think that he had ever called her Pickles!

Grandfather and Grandmother Gilman were looking out of the side window at them.

"Look at that, now!" said Grandfather Gilman. "Honestly, I feel like I want to pat that boy! There he sits, as stiff as a poker, talking to the prettiest girl in Oakdale with no more life in him than if he was a sack of potatoes. Did I, at his age, ever sit like a tailor's dummy on any girl's front porch?"

"Adam," retorted Grandma Gilman, "my distinct recollection is that at twenty-two you were the biggest fool in the county."

The mail-man came up the street.

When Hal Gilman ran down to the gate and he handed her a large, fat, square, cream-tinted envelope. Mr. Gilman had followed her.

"Have you anything for me?" he asked the mail-man. Mr. Halfred Joyce Gilman.

"The mail-man looked up with a start. 'Why, hello, Harry!' he cried heartily and held out his hand. 'I didn't recognize you. How you have grown!' Mr. Halfred Joyce Gilman was too dignified to wince. 'There's scarcely any change in you, Mr. Powell,' he said with lofty graciousness. 'The years treat you very kindly, indeed.' 'Greeting gray at a rat,' said the mail-man jerked off his hat a moment. 'Let me see. You asked about me. I got one here, but I hadn't any idea that Halfred Joyce Gilman could be you.'"

The letter he hunted out was a distasteful envelope. It bore, printed in one corner, the address of the Tenement House Sunshine League. Mr. Gilman took it with reverence, while the deep frown of concentration creased his brow.

"I shall have to ask you to excuse me," he said briskly to Miss Blanchard. "I have been waiting with some anxiety for this delayed communication. It is—well—the call of duty."

He glanced at the fat envelope. "You, too, will be naturally anxious to see what Uncle Sam has brought you."

"I know beforehand," she said. "These envelopes bring me no surprises. They are my only rays of sunshine."

He smiled sadly and shook his head. He intended to devote himself solely to the study of the envelope, and he undividedly to humanity, and he to ever married at all it would be in his settlement work; even then he could do more together than they could separately.

"You must come over often," invited Miss Blanchard. "I am interested in your work."

"I should be glad indeed if I could interest you seriously in it," he assured her. "I shall consider it my duty to do so if I can."

In the pursuit of this duty he came over nearly every day and most of the evenings. Miss Blanchard did not go out much. The fat, square, cream-tinted envelope kept her at home; made her refuse many invitations that she might have been glad to accept had she been the unsolicited, frivolous girl she used to be when she was young—say, seventeen or eighteen.

It was not long until Mr. Halfred Joyce Gilman knew all about the envelopes. She told him one evening when the family had gone out and they were alone on the Blanchard porch in the moonlight.

"Mr. Gilman," she observed tremulously. "I may trust you. We have known each other all our lives, and I never know you to betray a confidence, even when we had our worst spats. Mr. Gilman—"

"You may call me Halfred," he interrupted with quite elderly gentleness, laying his hand protectively upon her chair. "You have no brother. You need none."

"Thank you, Halfred," she gratefully replied. "I am going to confide in you. Halfred, my parents are bent on ruining my life. I have an attachment, a deep and lasting attachment, and they frown upon it. I have never met him but twice, but we have corresponded ever since. At first it was only the ordinary boy and girl correspondence, of course; but as it grew it deepened and ripened into something far too precious for them to understand. You, however, are a man of the world. You can, perhaps, appreciate how vital an attachment like this becomes." And she quoted four verses from the "Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam to prove it.

"Yes, I know, I know," replied Halfred, with dreamy emphasis. "I had also, when I was younger, an attachment that might have altered the course of my entire life, but it was clipped in the bud. She—" he choked up a little bit very successfully—"she proved faithless."

"I am sorry, brother," she said, turning her hand palm upward to clasp his strong and supple fingers with a grip of understanding. "I would not have re-opened your wound for worlds."

"It is nothing," he replied in a low voice, leaving his hand in hers. "Nothing whatever. The same devotion I would have poured out for her I now intend to pour out for the weak and the fallen."

"I am so proud, so proud, of my brother," she murmured.

After that they were no longer Mr. Gilman and Miss Blanchard; they were Halfred and Alice, and they were more together than ever, if possible. There was an ideal couple for mere brother and sister. They found so much to talk about that they scarcely needed other companionship, and even when they were with gay parties they could always be found by themselves some place, discussing the glory of self-abnegation as evidenced in settlement work, or the callousness of parents who frowned upon providentially ordained attachments.

Meanwhile, there was peace on Oak street. Grandfather Gilman became almost reconciled to Hal's stiffness, and the Blanchards began to rest somewhat easier about the cream-tinted envelopes. One evening at dined, however, Mr. Blanchard ventured upon, however, his daughter about Hal.

"Father," the fair young girl sternly reproved him, "how blind you are; how utterly mistaken! Mr. Gilman—"

Hal—and I are brother and sister; we have always been so. You must have but little respect for your daughter if you think she can be so foolish as to make remarks would seem to indicate. Only one heart, father, is attuned to each other in this world. There is but one such harmony for me."

"I didn't like his looks," replied Mr. Blanchard in a weak attempt at self-defense. "Exactly! And you do not like him now!"

From her courage peeped the corner of the latest fat, cream-tinted letter, and Mr. Blanchard eyed it with extreme disfavor.

"No," he admitted. "I do not like him; but I think that if I were a young man and knew this I would make it a point to come around and display my better side often enough to win confidence."

"And he insisted again," was the retort. "No, father, he will not come. I shall not permit him to do so."

And that night the sad, fair young girl wrote him that she must not come to Oakdale. Her father did not wish him to do so. In this she was not prevaricating; she merely wished to be oppressed. It was so sorrowfully and so subtly grand.

Strange enough, she did not confide in this latest oppression to Brother Halfred. Of late they had referred less and less often to the cream-tinted envelopes, talking more about settlement work in place of it. It was very pleasant to discuss the hardships and distasteful features of living in slums while walking with a dear brother in the moonlight on a rainy summer evening. It was very pleasant to tick in his dainty blood relative protectively under an arm and take her, radiant in her beauty, to receptions and dinners and theaters.

They were very, very proud, indeed, of each other, almost more so than if they had been actual brother and sister. But, nevertheless, in the fall, just before Hal was to go away, a change came over Sister Alice. She grew abstracted, and sometimes when the square envelopes came she seemed to hesitate about opening them. Sometimes she put them away for a full half-day before she read them, and ever was pressing. He handed her in and sat beside her.

"Now, tell me about it," he said, bewildered, but she had changed her mind. She could not tell him herself. She only clung to his arm, herself gasping at the audacity of what she was doing. At the depot, he tried to persuade her to go back home, knowing that something was wrong. She immediately broke down, the sad, fair young girl wept.

"You are my only friend and you must do as I say. This is the crisis of my life, Brother Hal, and I must meet it like a brave woman."

He shook his head, but she had already picked up her suitcase briskly and was walking on with a determined step. All he could do was to take her suitcase from her and carry both.

The train was just pulling out when Grandfather Gilman and Mr. Blanchard arrived at the depot. They had no difficulty in finding out that Hal, who was known, and Alice, whom they could easily describe, had purchased tickets for New York. Grandfather Gilman and Mr. Blanchard turned as by one impulse and shook hands until their eyes watered. Nothing could have pleased them better.

"Let's go, telegraph them," said Grandfather Gilman. "I know Hal's hotel. The young rascal!"

In the meantime Mr. Halfred Joyce Gilman was compelling his sister to tell him things, insisting on a brother's right in the matter.

Mr. Halfred Joyce Gilman moistened his lips. He had a peculiar grip at his throat, and he felt very lonesome all at once. A profound distaste for settlement work, even, settled upon him. Nevertheless, he stiffened himself. If his sister Alice was so deeply and irrevocably attached to this it was his duty to see that she attained happiness, and he would do it like a man.

He told her so.

They chatted very practically now. They discussed the deep and solemn sacrifice that a woman must make when she gave up her girlhood home to make a new home for a noble man. His fearfulness was such a support to her. She would never have had the courage to take the step if he had not.

She nestled confidently up to him. His voice sounded so good and strong, and she liked him so much better since he had dropped his age. She was glad, oh! so glad, that he had happened to the hotel. Hal jumped out with his suitcase. He let her in the cab, but presently he came out chuckling. He had two telegrams in his hand. One of them he had not opened, but the other he read and re-read with evident appreciation.

"You'd better open this one before I show you mine," he said, handing the unopened telegram to her. She looked at the inscription. It was addressed to Mrs. Halfred Joyce Gilman. She hadn't it back demurely. "It certainly isn't for me," she said with a laugh that had a suspicion of a tear or two in it.

"It doesn't seem to be for anybody," he retorted, laughing a bit nervously himself, and tore it open. It was from her father.

"My dear girl," it read, "you are a very foolish child, but it is no trouble at all to forgive you. Come back home as soon as you can."

He handed them both to her. "You precious young rascal," read Grandfather Gilman's message, "if you are already married when you get this, remember there's got to be another ceremony in Oakdale."

"It looks to me as if we had to make good, Pickles," laughed Hal. "I know where there is a preacher that works overtime. And giving a crisp direction, he jumped into the cab with her. Somehow or other her head happened on his shoulder. Fancy that women should cry when they are happy."

NO BEAUTY FOR HIM.

Haggerty and his wife were riding home on a street car. Haggerty was in that mellow state which urged him to be extra nice to his wife—to treat her as if he was courting her again, or as if he knew what he meant. Haggerty's wife sought to divert him from the extravagant compliments he was paying her.

"Look dear," she said, "there's a remarkably pretty girl sitting across the aisle from us, two rows back. If you want to notice her."

"Ah, my darling," whispered Haggerty, leaning close, "I have no eyes for beauty now. I just want to look at you."

That's the way he carried it too far and confirmed her suspicions that he was the way he was.

First Aerial Spy.

Herr Michowski, a German Pole attached to a Leipzig firm of aeroplane manufacturers, is now languishing in a Russian prison, and is likely to become famous as the world's first flying spy. He was arrested near Warsaw, guary in the neighborhood of Warsaw, having, as he alleged, lost his way while en route to the Russian front.

Life's Hardships.

A tragic case occurred recently in a court of law at Amberg, Germany. A young girl who was called as a witness having to answer the usual questions with regard to her past. She had, she said, a position as cashier, and had just become engaged, and she feared that she would be utterly disgraced if she was obliged to state publicly the fact that she had when very young been punished for a small theft. The court nevertheless insisted on her answering the question, and the girl thereupon opened a vein in court. She now lies in danger of death.

It is claimed that the proper stroke and motions of the arms and legs are more readily acquired in this manner than in the water, as is the more general way of teaching swimming.

The student is suspended by a wide belt from an overhead rail, while the feet are attached to a small cart of ropes running over pulleys and adjustable to various requirements.

The pupils thus suspended are then taught how to perform the movements of the breast stroke until the action becomes almost instinctive.

NEWEST IN FURNITURE

REMARKABLY PRETTY THINGS HAVE BEEN DESIGNED.

Breakfast Table Set Not Unreasonably Expensive, and Durable—Furn Stand a Delightful Accessory for Dining Room.

An inexpensive Austrian ware, for the breakfast table is called Rusticana. It comes in many odd shapes, though the same decoration holds throughout. It is cream colored, with garlands of large, brightly colored German flowers. Pitchers are from 25 cents to $1. Breakfast plates are 35 cents apiece; cups, 15 cents; egg trays, $1; platters, $1; bowls, 50 cents.

An attractive breakfast table is shown in the illustration. It is odd in design and takes up little space, as the four chairs are low of back and are made to exactly fit the four quarters of the table. It is also a fine card table. The amazingly low price for table and chairs is $21. It is in dull old oak.

An oblong, three-shelf stand, with a handle, stretching above the top shelf, was seen at $12. This was similar to a muffin stand, but newer of design.

A delightful dining room accessory is a fern stand. It has a zinc lined flower box, and is about the height of an ordinary table. These fern stands are often very handsome. One of mahogany with cane insets was seen at $17. This had square ends. And one with rounded box ends cost $20. A dull oak stand was $11.

A mahogany tea-wagon, which is shown in the last drawing, costs $20, and another one in oak and cane, with a cretonne-filled tray, is $25.

Two little high-chairs for the babies were most delightful little things—of mahogany, both of them. One at $22 was a chippendale, and the other was a Windsor at $12.—Philadelphia Record.

PUT TRIMMING ON HAT BAND

To the Small Bonnets This Idea Skillfully Done Has a Very Charming Effect.

Not being able to find a new way to trim a hat, this year's millinery artist has followed the ingenious method of taking the trimming from the hat and confining it to the band which goes around the head.

What funny things they are—these new little, untrimmed shapes, with a floral band to go around the back of the head under the high cascade knot! One produced by a leading importer is a flat-crowned, narrow-brimmed hat of lavender straw, without one symptom of flower, ribbon or feather any place on its limited expanse. To go under the knot, however, there is a band of thickly striped violets—almost funereally solid, in fact.

It is certainly a sensation, and the dealers are all predicting for this little flat hat, with the wayward trimming, an immense vogue for the spring.

USE FOR OLD LACE CURTAINS

May Be Employed for Effective Designs in Decorative Needlework as Suggested.

The housewife who is the owner of some really pretty old lace curtains has in them valuable materials for economical decorative needlework of the fairly good parts of the curtain display effective designs. If the design is small and dainty and enough duplicates of it are made, then they may be yoked, and even panels for children's wash dresses. For the latter purpose the pattern should be sharply cut out and arranged to the best advantage on a background of linen or washable material and basted firmly, taking care that all of it is perfectly flat. Either buttonhole the outline invisibly in white or use a thicker thread and bolder stitch. Let the applique stand out distinctly; if fancy dictates, work in velvets and other markings to suit your taste.

It is a comparatively easy matter to convert the larger undamaged pieces of old lace curtains into a variety of table and cushion covers, etc. By combining with linen or batiste very effective bureau or table covers can be made in many attractive patterns.

Wrinkles Are Out.

They're passed. Women do not have them. They are not being worn this year. Massage and the tango have done it. A sparkle to your eye is worth two crow's feet in the corner.

PLACE TO KEEP PLAYTHINGS

Does Away With Litter, and May Be Considered an Ornament to the Apartment.

I find this plan most successful for keeping the children's toys, living as I do in a small house, writes a contributor to the Modern Prissy. I secured four boxes of equal size (dry goods boxes), large enough for two to give a small wardrobe effect when placed one upon the other endwise. The ends of the other two boxes were used for shelves in these.

The whole was placed in a convenient corner and covered smoothly with cretonne. In the lower box, closed by a loosely hanging curtain, the children were taught to put all toys. The upper box was neatly lined with canvas through out, and with a curtain meeting the one below and having a draw string at top and bottom, it provided three dustproof shelves for linen or any of the many things that it is hard to find a place for in the small house. The outside appearance is very effective, especially if the cretonne is matched with other hangings, or with the paper of a room.

Calendar Blotters.

A rather well-known but useful little gift is that of a calendar blotter. It is quickly made and very inexpensive. From a large 10 cent desk blotter cut smaller blotters, say 6 by 3 inches. Paste upon each of these smaller blotters a small calendar leaf. When finished, you will have twelve small calendars, each labeled with one of the months. Then the pack is arranged in order from January to December and tied with a broad red ribbon. Slip a twig or so of holly or mistletoe under the bow.

To Freshen a Hat.

To renew the appearance of the navy blue straw hat for this spring's wear, when the trimmings are removed, wash the straw and wipe it clean of dust. Before it dries scrub it in navy blue aniline dye with a stiff brush. If you do not object to a shiny finish there are small tins of hat enamel in all colors to be had at the druggist's for about ten cents.

BRIGHT STRIPES THE VOGUE

Colors and Combinations for Spring May Almost Be Described as Glaring.

The Roman stripes with their dazzling bright hues are to be worn this spring by women.

From all indications the red and gold stripes are to be displayed in every possible guise, say the merchants in vests and sashes and even in more startling ways the bright stripes are to be worn.

The most popular way of wearing the Roman colors will be in sashes. They are being shown in the stores made with a bow in the back, built high and with draping tassels on the side.

The stripes also will be seen on the hats. The ribbons will be draped about the hat and will allow a sort of tassel to hang from the side or back.

Other styles will be striped vests. Vests have been worn all winter, but the brighter stripes are to be the spring style. These are to be made with long points and cut on the bias, allowing the stripes to slant away from the points.

FASHION TINTS

The woman of limited income will be wise to adopt one color for her wardrobe, with variations of tone and treatment.

The turban shows no signs of waning. One of the fashionable colors is stone gray. Both long and short sleeves are fashionable.

Among the late skirts are those cut with yokes. Hats of corduroy are fashionable for young girls. Fabrics show designs borrowed from the Chinese. Many new spring costumes show the rippling flounce. For morning wear the silk or satin skirt holds its own. Rich flower tones appear in the colors of the new fabrics.

Checks the Vogue.

Checks are used almost as liberally as stripes and plaids. Black-and-white checked street suits are shown in the newest cuts. They are always a good choice for the women who need not be very economical. For the woman who can have only one suit the checked one is hardly the right choice. It is much more noticeable than one of plain color, and therefore the owner of one tries it more quickly than she would the one of a plain colored suit. Moreover, black-and-white checked woolen goods does grow soiled rather quickly. Small as the amount of suit seems to be at a glance in such a suit, it is really half of the whole surface so it is hardly to be wondered at that it soon needs to be sent to the cleaner.

Whit Gowns for Spring.

So many and various of type are the white gowns now being made up for spring service, that unquestionably a "white" season confronts us. The costumes likely to be first worn—at after Easter church weddings and the like—are those in taffeta made up into skirts with circular flounces and into bodies trimmed with narrow ruffles, and the embroiderers' volutes, veiling and bengaline slips. Some what less elaborate are the satin gowns made up with heavy flat lace and with girldle and plaques in colored voile, and the wool crepons with embroidered batiste yoke and sleeves.

New Handkerchiefs.

There is quite a departure from customary handkerchief styles this season. Some are trimmed with footings; black and white handkerchiefs are quite the thing; colored handkerchiefs are very fashionable, the handkerchief proper being the color and the border of white.

NEW CREATION

with other hangings, or with the paper of a room.

A rather well-known but useful little gift is that of a calendar blotter. It is quickly made and very inexpensive. From a large 10 cent desk blotter cut smaller blotters, say 6 by 3 inches. Paste upon each of these smaller blotters a small calendar leaf. When finished, you will have twelve small calendars, each labeled with one of the months. Then the pack is arranged in order from January to December and tied with a broad red ribbon. Slip a twig or so of holly or mistletoe under the bow.

To Freshen a Hat.

To renew the appearance of the navy blue straw hat for this spring's wear, when the trimmings are removed, wash the straw and wipe it clean of dust. Before it dries scrub it in navy blue aniline dye with a stiff brush. If you do not object to a shiny finish there are small tins of hat enamel in all colors to be had at the druggist's for about ten cents.

Alleged Burglar Outwits Police.

Passaic, N. J.—The police were unable to take the fingerprints of Alfred Smith, arrested for burglary, because he used acid which made his finger tips as smooth as glass.

Dear Chances Children.

Hackensack, N. J.—John Jackson, a farmer, is afraid he will be forced to kill a big buck deer. The animal insists on chasing his children and Jackson has asked permission of the game warden to kill it.

Murphy Government Head.

Thrace, N. Y.—Who is the head of government in America? said Justice Sewell to John Solomon, a Syrian applicant for citizenship. "Charlie Murphy," said Solomon. Even the judge laughed.

PISTOL IN MOUTH REMOVES HIS SMILE

Hotel Clerk Takes It Seriously When Money, Watch and Stranger Disappear.

Chicago—Bruce Clark, clerk at a hotel in East Eighteenth street, pressed lightly on the desk with his finger tips and assumed an air of polite expectancy when a baggageless but seemingly prosperous stranger approached him early the other morning.

Even when the stranger rudely shoved aside the pen offered to him, Clark was unflinched.

"Thought you wished to register, sir," he apologized. "What else can I do for you, sir?"

"Now you're talking," said the visitor. "Fork over!"

He held out a large revolver from his pockets and aimed both of them at Clark's right eye.

"Ha, ha! Very good, very good!" laughed the affable clerk. "I wish

Alfred Both of Them at Clark.

I could keep my face straight like that."

"If you laugh any more I'm going to kill you," earnestly remarked the man with the revolvers, shoving one of the guns into Clark's open mouth.

"Now try keeping your face straight," Clark tried and succeeded in administering a severe and sudden lesson to the stranger wasn't joking. He was sure that he had a sudden lunch the other and the man, the watch, the revolver and the $7 left.

KILL A WOUNDED PRISONER

Two New Jersey Policemen Capture Mortally Injured "Burglar" and End His Sufferings.

West Orange, N. J.—Two policemen captured a burglar the other night, found the culprit had been mortally wounded, and killed him to end his sufferings.

Returning to his home on Valley Road at midnight, Thorwald Jensen, an Edison works employe, heard strange noises on the second floor. So

No Boy Autoists.

Nobody under the age of sixteen years will be permitted to drive an automobile or operate a motorcycle in Wisconsin during the coming season. This is the information contained in the annual bulletin of the secretary of state on automobile regulations, a copy having been received by Highway Commissioner Peter Lockman.

Several other new changes regulating automobile traffic, which go into effect this season are contained in the pamphlet, chief of which is the new speed limit law placing the maximum speed within the limits of any city or village at fifteen miles per hour and the maximum on country roads at twenty-five miles per hour. There has been no law governing speed heretofore.

Another change in the rules is that providing that number plates can hereafter be transferred from one car to another upon payment of fifty cents to the secretary of state and the filing of a description of the new car with the secretary.

The license fee for automobiles dealers has also been increased from $5 to $10. This will include four sets of number plates. —Stanley Republican.

MERRILL VOTERS VOTE TO ISSUE RAILWAY BONDS

The city of Merrill, at a special election held on Tuesday, decided by a vote of 2,392 to 33, to issue 75,000 bonds with which to purchase preferred stock in the proposed Minneapolis, Merrill & Marinette railway.

The line, as planned, will be about forty miles in length and will run southwest and northeast from Merrill, connecting with the old Soo line at Athens, Marathon county, and with the Chicago & Northwestern in Lindsdale county, near Antigo. This would give Merrill an almost airline route to the Twin Cities and much better connections with Fox River Valley cities, Milwaukee and Chicago and the forest regions of the north.

Now that the bond issue has passed, it is expected that actual construction work will soon begin.

THE MAN WITH THE AX.

In years gone by we have heard a great deal about the man with the hoe. His praises have been sung by people of all nations, and it is to judge a man by his notoriety, this man with the hoe is some guy. But there is another man who has the man with the hoe backed right off the map, and he is the man with the ax. The reason he is such a pesteriferous cuss is because he wants to grind the ax, and he wants the newspaper man to turn the grindstone while he does it.

The man with the ax comes to us in various guises and forms, but he is always after the same thing. His object in life is to secure free advertising, and he wants it thru the columns of the country press. Sometimes he appears in the guise of a religious sect, maybe some new form of medicine that is calculated to cure all the ills of mankind, maybe it is the woman's suffrage movement, or the association of women, or the Wisconsin Advancement association, the International Misinformation Bureau, or one of a hundred other societies or associations that maintain a press bureau whose sole object is to make a goat of the country newspaper man.

Some of the newspaper men have awakened from their long sleep, and others are gradually coming too, and the chances are that in the course of time the so-called press bureaus will pass out of existence as being unprofitable, as when the country publisher stops printing the dope, there will then be no further sense in maintaining a corps of salaried writers for the compilation and distribution of the stuff.

May the change come soon.

George Ade on Matrimony.
George Ade, discussing matrimony in an after dinner speech at the Chicago Athletic club, said:

"Marriage has the effect of giving a man a swelled head."
"Many a time, looking at this husband or that, I say to myself:

"Ah, if that man were only as wise as he thinks his wife thinks he is!"

about the man and his wife who were on a raft in mid-ocean, shipwrecked, and starving. Suddenly the man cried with joy: "A sail! a sail!" His wife immediately revived, and wanted to know when and where the sale was to take place.

Well, you must admit that our women folks know more about a real sale than a man does. A woman won't pay $2.95 for a 50c sofa pillow, nor send money in a letter for a receipt for nabbing a suit-mate. No sir.

Speaking of suit mates, we are getting in fine shape to supply the spring demand for cottages, etc. If you are getting ready to work in double harness, come to see us. Come soon so we don't go stale.

Observations and records as to the general age of trees have shown that the pine tree attains 700 years as a maximum length of life; 425 years is regarded as the allotted span of the silver fir; the larch lives, as a rule, about 275 years; the red beech, 245; the aspen, 210; the birch 200; the ash, 170; the elder, 145; the elm, 130. The heart of the oak begins to rot at about the age of 300 years. Of the holly it is said that there is a specimen 410 years old near Aschaffenburg, Germany. A count of the annual rings in a gigantic California redwood tree showed that it began to grow in A. D. 550. It was 350 feet high, with a base circumference of ninety feet.

No Boy Antiochs

Nobody under the age of sixteen years will be permitted to drive an automobile or operate a motorcycle in Wisconsin during the coming season. This is the information contained in the annual bulletin of the secretary of state on automobile regulations, a copy having been received by Highway Commissioner Peter Lockrantz.

Several other new changes regulating automobile traffic, which go into effect this season, are contained in the pamphlet, chief of which is the new speed limit law placing the maximum speed within the limits of any city or village at fifteen miles per hour and the maximum on country roads at twenty-five miles per hour. There has been no law governing speed heretofore.

Another change in the rules is that providing that number plates can hereafter be transferred from one car to another upon payment of fifty cents to the secretary of state and the filing of a description of the new car with the secretary.

The license fee for automobile dealers has also been increased from $5 to $10. This will include four sets of number plates.—Stanley Republican.

MERRILL VOTERS VOTE TO ISSUE RAILWAY BONDS

The city of Merrill, at a special election held on Tuesday, decided by a vote of 192 to 33 to issue $5,000 in bonds with which to purchase preferred stock in the proposed Minneapolis, Merrill & Marinette railway. The line, as planned, will be about forty miles in length and will run southwest and northeast from Merrill, connecting with the old Soo line at Athens, Marathon county, and with the Chicago & Northwestern in Langlade county, near Antigo. This would give Merrill an almost air-line route to the Twin Cities and much better connections with Fox River Valley cities, Milwaukee and Chicago and the forest regions of the north. Now that the bond issue has passed, it is expected that actual construction work will soon begin.

THE MAN WITH THE AX.

In years gone by we have heard a great deal about the man with the hoe. His praises have been sung by people of all nations, and if we are to judge a man by his notoriety, this man with the hoe is some guy. But there is another man who has the man with the hoe backed right off the map, and he is the man with the ax. The reason he is such a pesteriferous cuss is because he wants to grind the ax and he wants the newspaper man to turn the grindstone while he does it.

The man with the ax comes to us in various guises and forms, but he is always after the same thing. His object in life is to secure free advertising, and he wants it thru the columns of the country press. Sometimes he appears in the guise of a religious sect, maybe some new form of medicine that is calculated to cure all the ills of mankind, maybe it is the woman suffrage movement, or the association opposed to woman suffrage, the state university, the Wisconsin Advancement association, the International Misinformation Bureau, or one of a hundred other societies or associations that maintain a press bureau whose sole object is to make a goat of the country newspaper man. Some of the newspaper men have awakened from their long sleep, and the chances are that in the course of time these so-called press bureaus will pass out of existence as being unprofitable, as when the country publisher stops printing the dope, there will then be no further sense in maintaining a corps of salaried writers for the compilation and distribution of the stuff. May the change come soon.

SUPP. CARY ADVISES FARM WORK DURING VACATION

In a circular letter sent to principals and superintendents under date of March 17th, State Superintendent C. P. Cary suggests that it would be a good thing for all concerned if school boys were to secure employment on farms during the summer vacation. He mentions in this connection his experience as principal of a school located in a western farming community. He made careful and systematic plans for placing as many of the town boys as possible on farms for the long vacation period. The outcome was in every way satisfactory. The boys enjoyed it and it acted as a valuable tonic in relation to the school work. The farmers found the boys intelligent with respect to matters connected with the farm and this proved stimulating to them.

Superintendent Cary points out that certain precautions will have to be taken if the plan is carried out. He further states that perhaps some of the boys who do not go to farms can secure plots of ground in or near town for the raising of some suitable crop, such as potatoes. He suggests that a number of boys might rent a field of considerable size on a co-operative basis.
